DETAILED ACTION

1. Applicant's request for reconsideration of the finality of the rejection of the last Office action is persuasive and, therefore, the finality of that action is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).
4. Claims 21-43 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yabutani et al., in view of Yablonowski et al.

Yabutani et al. discloses an information electric appliance renting system for renting information electric appliances to a plurality of individual use contractors (via contractor A), comprising: at least one information electric appliance (via equipment with motor and/or inverter) which is leased by a service providing company (contractor B) to respective ones of a plurality of individual use contractors (contractor A), and a rent managing server of the service providing company for managing the leased information electric appliances of the service providing company (via supervisory unit), wherein the at least one information electric appliance has communication means for sending including electric power consumed thereby to the data rent managing server (col. 6, lines 36-54), wherein the data sent by the at least one information electric appliance to the rent managing server further includes information relating to at least one of manufacture and use of the at least one information electric appliance (via operation status data collection).

Yabutani further discloses the rent managing server includes judgment means for judging the data sent from the at least one Information electric appliance carrying out a judgment of abnormality of the at least one information electric appliance and for judging on a basis of a judgment result whether or not maintenance needs to be carried out (col. 8, lines 42-51). Further, the rent managing server includes means for generating a running pattern on a basis of the data sent from the at least one information electric appliance to compare a total cost up to a scrapping processing of the at least one information electric appliance with a total cost up to a scrapping processing of an information electric appliance which is replaceable with the at least one information electric appliance to execute the replacement judgment for the at least one information electric appliance (col. 4, lines 40-52).

However, Yabutani fails to explicitly disclose a managing server having communication means for receiving the data sent from the at least one information electric appliance so that the service providing company receives from the plurality of individual use contractors payment of the lease and pays an electric power company an amount corresponding to the total consumed electric power of the leased information electric appliances of the combined individual use contractors.

Yablonowski et al. discloses the concept of charging a fee to a user where a service company services a lighting system to the user's facility. The fee is charged to the end user, such that the fee is a function of a difference between the original power consumption and the new power consumption. For example, the fee from the end user to the service company is forty cents where the original electric utility cost was one dollar (as illustrated in FIG. 1) and the new electric utility cost is sixty cents.

Yablonowski et al. further discloses the fee is the difference between the original power consumption and the new power consumption multiplied by actual hours of operation, multiplied by a power rate, and multiplied by an air conditioning reduction factor. The hours of operation, the power rate and the air conditioning reduction factor may be determined through negotiation. Other calculations may be used to suit the specific requirements of the end user and the service provider, such as a fee comprising only a portion of the reduction.

From this teaching of Yablonowski et al., it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modify the monitoring of equipment of Yabutani et al. to include the fee charge to the user and the payment of electric utility as taught by Yablonowski in order to provide energy saving.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 21-43 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Carpenter et al., Bartone et al. and Boies et al. are cited as art of interest.
